Pastor general speaks in Idaho, visits SEP camp in Orr, Minn.

ORR, Minn. — Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong spoke June 13 to about 500 campers, staff, brethren and ministers here at the first session of the Church's Summer Educational Program (SEP) camp.

He landed the previous evening at the Orr airport, flying from Boise, Idaho, where he addressed 511 brethren assembled at the Boise State University Student Union for Sabbath services.

Mr. Armstrong, personal aide Aaron Dean, his wife Michelle and members of the G-II crew left the Burbank, Calif., airport 10:30 a.m. Pacific Daylight Time (PDT) June 12, arriving at the Boise Municipal Airport at 12:20 p.m. Mountain Daylight Time (MDT).

Mr. Armstrong was met there by area ministers, including local church elder Ron Sower and his wife Judy. Mr. Sower previously worked as a steward on the G-II, and renewed friendships with Mr. Armstrong, G-II pilot Ed Black and other crew members, said Jeff McGowan, pastor of the Boise congregation.

Mr. McGowan and Mr. Sower took the pastor general on a tour of Boise before driving to services. Mr. McGowan said the pastor general pointed out several Boise landmarks to them, recalling his 1924 trip through the state en route to Oregon.

He recalled "that most of the streets were unpaved in 1924, and that he said that their car 'roared through' the streets at 20 miles per hour," Mr. McGowan added.

The group continued to the student union, where Mr. Armstrong addressed brethren from the Ontario and Baker, Ore., and Boise, Blackfoot and Twin Falls, Idaho, churches.

Terry Henson, wife of Helena, Mont., pastor Darryl Henson, sang special music before the sermon.

"There was tremendous enthusiasm before Mr. Armstrong's sermon," said Mr. McGowan, who added that the pastor general spoke about the calling of the Church. "Even the children seemed to be extra well-behaved and well-mannered."

Describing the visit as "a very memorable event," Mr. McGowan noted that "the attendance was very good considering the wide distances people had to travel."

He added that many brethren drove "five to six hours one way" to hear the pastor general, and that Bill Swanson, pastor of the Salt Lake City, Utah, church, and his wife Judy drove "about seven hours" to hear Mr. Armstrong.

After services ended at 3:15 p.m., Mr. Armstrong spoke to 16 ministers and wives. "It was a nice, family-style meeting," said Mr. Dean, who also attended with his wife.

"Everybody wished he could have stayed longer," said Mr. McGowan. "It's very hard to put into words how much we — everyone — appreciated the visit."

"Mr. Armstrong expressed that he wished he could have stayed and met all the people, but that it was a 'physical impossibility' to greet everybody."

Mr. Armstrong and his party were driven back to the G-II and left Boise at 4:45 p.m. for Orr.

First session

Before landing at the Orr airport about 7:30 p.m. Central Daylight Time (CDT), the G-II flew over the SEP camp, according to Mr. Dean.

After arriving at the camp, the pastor general had dinner with Kevin Dean, director of Youth Opportunities United (YOU) and the SEP camp, and 20 other ministers, staff and wives.

After dinner he attended a 10 p.m. basketball game in the camp gym between the basketball and volleyball staffs and the camp faculty members.

After a brunch the next day with camp faculty and staff in the SEP dining hall, Mr. Armstrong toured the girls' and boys' dormitories that had won weekly awards for neatness.

"He was very impressed with the camp and kids," said Mr. Dean, the camp director. "He spent more time with the kids than ever before."

After the tour Mr. Armstrong addressed about 500 campers, staff, ministers and Church members in the SEP gym.

"Greetings, you pioneers," he said. "Have you been learning much so far?"

He spoke from 11 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. on the opportunities children of Church members have to understand God's truth and eventually become members through that opportunity, Mr. Dean, the pastor general's aide, said.

Mr. Armstrong toured the campus after the address, visiting the swimming, softball, riflery and archery areas. He later watched a barefoot waterskiing demonstration.

"Mr. Armstrong was impressed with the camp," said Mr. Dean, his personal aide. "He noted that the kids were very excited about Youth 82 and the camp. He met and talked with several campers."

The pastor general, the G-II crew and members of the Work's television crew who videotaped Mr. Armstrong's visit, left the Orr airport after the tour. The group arrived back in Pasadena late afternoon.

Mr. Dean said the pastor general plans to speak at all three camp sessions at Orr, but probably would be unable to speak at the Big Sandy SEP because of his scheduled July trip to Europe and the Middle East.

Diggers ready for work at City of David project

PASADENA — Ambassador College students, faculty and one Church member participating in the City of David archaeological excavations in Jerusalem this summer flew to London, England, June 13 from New York City, according to evangelist Raymond F. McNair, deputy chancellor of the Pasadena campus.

The group, which includes Big Sandy Dean of Students Ronald Kelly, Pasadena faculty member Richard Paige and their families, was scheduled to tour London; Paris, France; Geneva, Switzerland; Rome, Italy; and other parts of Europe before flying to Tel Aviv, Israel, June 27, Mr. McNair said.

The deputy chancellor added that Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong was "very much in favor of the dig," and that the pastor general was pleased with the students' example.

The deputy chancellor also noted that both the college administration and Mr. Paige, the dig coordinator, were monitoring the military situation in the Middle East to avoid any problems during the dig.

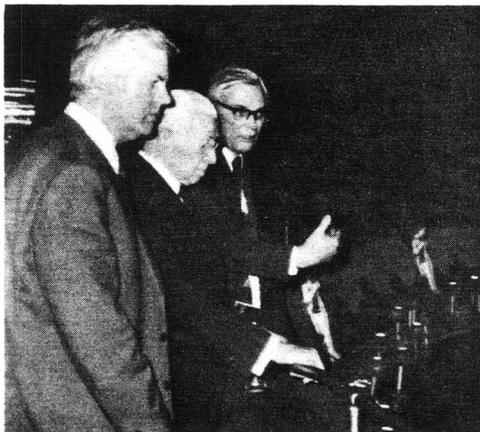

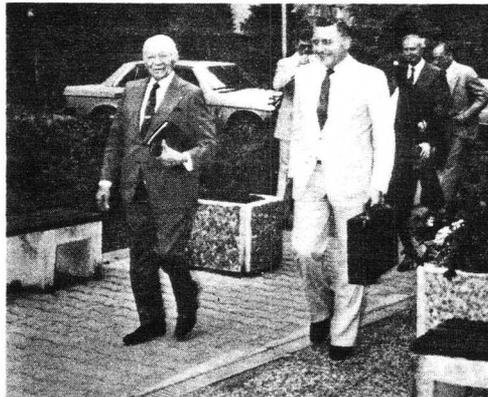

He said that neither he nor Mr. Paige anticipated "any serious problem," but that arrangements would be made quickly if a threatening situation developed.

"However, we don't foresee any serious situation developing," he emphasized.

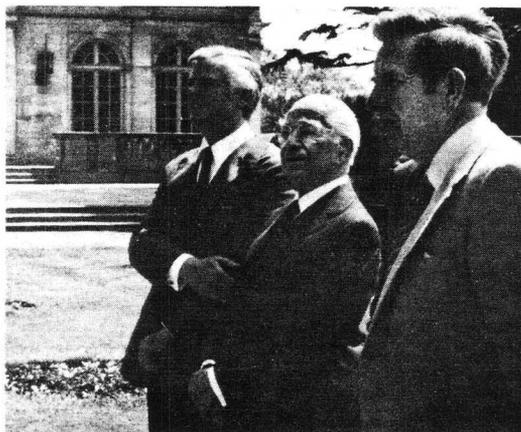

The students and seven Church members will spend four weeks digging at the City of David excavation under the direction of Yigal Shiloh, professor of archaeology at Hebrew University, before returning to Pasadena, Big Sandy and other places in the United States in early August.

Charismatic pope pushes for church unity

Plain Truth news editor Gene H. Hogberg traveled to Europe to cover the pope's trip to England, the seven-nation economic summit in Versailles, France, and the NATO head of state conference in Bonn, West Germany. He filed the following report on the papal entourage in England, from Paris.

PARIS — I have just arrived here after having witnessed, in person as an accredited Plain Truth correspondent, the visit of Pope John Paul II to Great Britain.

This was an event of great significance, certainly far more than the pope's visit to the United States in 1979.

The most significant event of the pope's visit occurred the second day — the first-ever visit of a pope to Canterbury Cathedral, headquarters of the Church of England, which broke off from Rome 449 years ago. This occurred Saturday morning, May 29.

It was a dramatic service and one that could get the on-again, off-again faltering movement for church unity back on course. According to one source, more was probably achieved through this service than years of laborious study and reports by the theological scholars representing the Catholics, the Anglicans and the other Protestant bodies.

Archbishop Robert Runcie, primate of all England and leader of the worldwide Anglican Communion, was the pope's host for this ecumenical function.

In his introductory address, Archbishop Runcie said: "Our unity is not in the past only, but also in the future. We have a common vision, which also breaks up the lazy prejudices and easy assumptions of the present."

The pope took as his text in his homily, or message (and he gave the main message of the service), Christ's prayer for His disciples "that they may all be one."

The pope said that his visit to the cathedral was a day "that centuries and generations have awaited."

After the service a Common Declaration was signed by the pope and the archbishop of Canterbury, which declared: "We commit ourselves anew to the task of working for unity with firm faith, renewed hope and ever deeper love."

This was a clear indication that the dialogue started by the Anglican-Roman Catholic International Commission would continue.

This ecumenical service did not contain a common eucharist (the joint sharing of the bread and the wine). That type of service is further down the road. The only ritual that was performed, if one could call it that, was a repeat on the part of the archbishop and the pope of their so-called baptismal vows, in other

The previous day the pope made a courtesy call at Buckingham Palace to visit Queen Elizabeth II. The two talked privately for about 35 minutes.

Here are some comments from Anglican minister Mullen who writes:

"There are several good reasons why we should be suspicious of the ballyhoo surrounding the papal visit. I do not share the vicious hostility to all things Catholic that we words, that they were joint followers of Christ.

The Anglicans hope to act as a bridge between the Catholic church and the independent denomination Protestants. The Anglicans are themselves divided between a high church, much closer to Rome in liturgy in tradition, and a low church that is much closer to various Protestant bodies.

Not all observers, however, were falling head over heels over the charismatic pope's pronouncements at Canterbury Cathedral and his profession of working toward church unity.

One dissenting view was expressed by an Anglican vicar from Tockwith in York, Peter Mullen. Mr. Mullen pointed out the difficulties ahead with regard to church unity as well as the rather compromising position that church union would have upon the throne of England.

In this light it was interesting that Prince Charles, heir to the throne, was at this ecumenical service at Canterbury Cathedral. Not only did he attend it, he made a special request to be there so that he could meet the pope as well as the archbishop of Canterbury. The three were photographed before the service began. The photograph appeared in every major newspaper in Great Britain. (See photo, page 3.)

now see from some extreme Protestants with their loud mouths and slogans.

"But it is not only the bigots who are shouting 'No popery.' There are genuine political fears. More than 400 years ago, in complicated circumstances that involved a lot more than Henry VIII's marital difficulties, England decided to be free from Rome's jurisdiction.

"Because the Church of England is the established church, its head is the Queen and its government is closely tied to Parliament. Any attempt to unite the two churches under the Pope would become a civil and legal revolution affecting all Britain.

"It is significant (some might say ominous) that the joint committee studying paths to unity between the two churches made no mention of the Queen's status...

"I am all for compromise. It is the reasonable way to settle differences, but it is not possible to compromise when one side clearly states that its own view is the absolute truth.

"Beneath the smiles and the friendly words that issued from the papal platform, it is hard to avoid the suspicion that here lies something of that old technique: Will you walk into my parlor? said the Spider to the Fly!

Giving worries to God 'doesn't cost us a penny'

Coming from a long line of worriers I felt this issue's column could deal with the subject of worrying. My grandmother was a great worrier. At 86 she worried about who would be the pallbearers at her funeral.

My mother carried on the tradition. To this day she still worries if I'm getting enough sleep and if I'm eating all my vegetables.

One of my father's favorite sayings was radio commentator Paul Harvey's "Why worry, nothing will turn out all right anyway."

My uncle used to tell a story about Tom Anxiety. Tom's friends all knew him as a worrier. One day Joe saw his worrying friend bouncing along as happy as a man could be, whistling and humming and wearing a huge smile. Joe could hardly believe his eyes, and he had to find out what happened.

"Tom, what's happened to you?" he asked. "You don't seem worried any more."

"It's wonderful, Joe. I haven't worried for several weeks now."

"That's great. How did you manage it?"

Tom explained, "I hired a man to do all of my worrying for me."

"What?"

"Right."

"Well," Joe mused, "I must say that that is a new wrinkle. Tell me, how much does he charge you?"

"A thousand dollars a week."

"A thousand dollars a week? How could you possibly raise a thousand dollars a week to pay him?"

Tom answered, "That's his worry."

Wouldn't that be great? Don't you wish it were possible for someone else to handle our worries for us? Well, God's Word says that is possible. Indeed God encourages us to cast all of our anxiety on Him (1 Peter 5:7, New International Version).

And what is best of all — that arrangement doesn't cost us a penny.

Worry can give us ulcers, sap the vitality out of living and drive us to an early grave. Worry makes us incapable of handling life's problems. Worry shows lack of faith in God and keeps us from assuming responsibilities and developing Christian character.

One who worries looks off into the future. But the future is not here yet. There is nothing to lay a hand on. There is nothing that can be done.

The worrier imagines that matters will be this way, then thinks they might be that way. Because we cannot know, we allow worry to tear us apart.

In Matthew 6:31 Christ says, "Do not worry." But He does not leave the matter there. He explains how to overcome worry.

"Decide what's worth worrying about. Christ says: "Do not worry about your life (things), what you will eat or what you will drink; nor about your body, what you will put on. Is not life more than food and the body more than clothing?" (Matthew 6:25, New King James Version).

Madison Avenue (American advertising industry) would like to have us think that if we don't have a swimming pool and two weeks in Hawaii every year and new clothes and fancy cars, we're really missing out on life. But I have yet to meet anyone who derived real happiness from these things. They usually worry about payment.

We need to be thankful for what we have, rather than be anxious or worried about how we can get more. In other words, Christ is helping put our values in perspective.

"Discovering our worth to God. Christ then says: "Look at the birds of the air, for they neither sow nor reap nor gather into barns, yet your heavenly Father feeds them. Are you not of more value than they?" (Matthew 6:26).

What are we worried about? Christ is asking. If God takes care of all those tiny birds don't you think He'll take care of us, His children? So, why worry?

"Worrying doesn't help. Christ's next comment on the subject of anxiety is a big question. "Who of you by worrying can add a single hour to his life?" (Matthew 6:27, NIV). Does worry change things? Christ says "no."

"Realize God knows our needs. "So do not worry, saying, 'What shall we eat?' or 'What shall we drink?' or 'What shall we wear?'"

For the pagans run after all these things, and your heavenly Father knows that you need them" (Matthew 6:31, 32).

Since God knows our needs and problems, what are we supposed to do with them? Talk to God about them. Apply Philippians 4:6: "Let your request be made known to God."

"Seek God's Kingdom first. The next statement of Christ's is one of the most meaningful verses in the Bible. "But seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added to you" (Matthew 6:33, NKJV).

We need to make that our goal, and He'll take care of the details of our lives. This principle is one of the surest cures I know for the anxiety, worry and tension that can plague all of us.

Be a lifter, not a leaner, my mother used to say. It's thrilling when you see people who have their own hurts extending themselves to others. They're saying: "My problems can wait. How can I help you?"

If we do this we'll see the large and small things in our lives fall into place as we put His Kingdom first, as we run forward to His goal.

"Concentrate on today's problems. Christ said: "Therefore do not worry about tomorrow, for tomorrow will worry about itself. Each day has enough trouble of its own" (Matthew 6:34, NIV).

Take care of today's problems. Take care of the troubles that we have to handle now. That is the key to eliminating worry. Concern for today's problems does not tear us up, because we can get a handle on them.

The Christian life is a long climb, with its moments of exhilaration and its times of hard work. Our whole lives lie ahead of us, and God wants us to grow into perfection. We can't be overwhelmed by our shortcomings. We need God's help to work on them one day at a time. That's the way to grow.

Here is a simple procedure I have found helpful when I find myself worrying instead of working. Instead of worrying, I sit down and write out the following questions on a piece of paper.

(1) What is my problem?

(2) What does God want me to do about it?

(3) When, where and how should I begin?

(4) Have I asked for God's help in the matter?

Sometimes just defining a problem by forcing yourself to write it out leads to a solution. When the problem is defined, begin immediately to look for the solution in God's Word.

But then, don't settle for good solutions and noble ideas; get to work. Schedule your actions and put the hardest task first. And, don't worry — act!

Letters TO THE EDITOR

Prayers improved

First, I would like to thank Mr. [Dexter] Faulkner and his assistants for our fine newspaper. It puts the emphasis on the Work and in particular on Mr. [Herbert W.] Armstrong's activities — that is the way it should be.

I believe The Worldwide News has made it possible for all of us in God's Church to improve the quality of our prayers. Having a Worldwide News at hand while on our knees we can be so much more specific in our prayers. I find "International Desk" and "Update" to be very helpful in this regard.

Ministerial pictorial

Just wanted to say how much I appreciated the pictorial listing of the ministry — such a joy to see so many of the young men I knew from Pasadena and the dig 10 years ago are still "hanging in" doing the Work!

My husband and I spent a delightful evening saying, "Remember him! — and "Wow, he sure has/hasn't changed!"

Brethren eager, in tune to Church Minister visits Spain, Portugal

PASADENA — "God's Work in Spain is like a piece of fruit — it's showing signs of ripening," said Fernando Barriga, pastor of the Tijuana and Mexicali, Mexico, churches, who returned here May 31 after a 39-day trip to Spain and Portugal.

"Some people I visited had never seen a [Worldwide Church of God] minister before," Mr. Barriga noted. "Others had been receiving the PV for 10 to 12 years and didn't know they could even request a visit!"

After notifying subscribers who have received La Pura Verdad (Spanish Plain Truth) for more than one year, of his visit to the two countries, Mr. Barriga followed a strict schedule of appointments to see 30 prospective members who requested a visit.

He met a man who had a Bible in his house 50 years and began reading it only after receiving the Church's literature. Mr. Barriga found the brethren in Spain and Portugal encouraged and growing spiritually.

A Catholic-oriented regime imposed by former President Generalissimo Francisco Franco ended when the president died in 1975.

Since then, a Spanish constitution has been ratified, allowing Spaniards religious freedom, said Mr. Barriga.

Many Spanish people are questioning what they learned in Catholic parochial schools, he added.

For example, "The Jehovah's Witnesses are taking advantage of the religious freedoms by going door to door, stirring up people against their Catholic, Mormon and Baptist backgrounds."

Mr. Barriga first traveled through Portugal, baptizing Ilda Sanches Rodrigues and giving Bible studies on the Sabbaths. Eight baptizated members live in Portugal.

On April 27 two cameras and a raincoat were stolen from the minister's parked car in Salamanca, Spain. But, he had most of his money with him at the time.

Prospective members

Mr. Barriga cited many stories of trying to rendezvous with prospective members. Some were found living in other countries, and some he tracked down only after hours of driving from scanty directions. He waited for others at meeting points, but they did not arrive.

But those he did contact showed a vigor for learning God's truths, Mr. Barriga said. In Lisbon, the capital of Portugal, a Church of Christ minister expressed interest in the Church.

"I explained our doctrines and he said his church practiced tithing and kept the Sabbath and Ten Commandments," said Mr. Barriga.

"I didn't tell him everything about our Church, but said we would send him literature."

In Spain, Mr. Barriga found that nuns and seminary school students were asking for biblical information from Church member Gerardo Espada.

In 1973 some residents of Madronera, a town of 4,000, warned Mr. Espada that closing his store on the Sabbath would result in loss of business.

Since then similar shops have collapsed, noted Mr. Barriga, but Mr. Espada's has been thriving.

The local elder visited persons interested in the Church in Valencia, Spain, and checked on Fall Festival arrangements at the Feast site in Cullera.

Mario Ferrer, a member from Madrid, the capital of Spain, is building a collapsible speaker's pulpit for the Feast, Mr. Barriga said.

Mr. Ferrer is also constructing units that display La Pura Verdad above cardholders offering free subscriptions to the magazine.

In May, La Pura Verdad was advertised for three weeks in Cambio 16, a Spanish magazine similar to U.S. News & World Report, and ABC and La Vanguardia newspapers, the minister noted.

No church in Spain

One obstacle brethren in Spain face is that the Church is not registered in the country.

"All we need is five members in one city," the minister said. "The most we have in one city are three in Malaga."

If there were a church in Spain, a minister could possibly be sent to the country, Mr. Barriga continued, but until then, Spanish brethren must settle on being together at the Feast.

Without a church, brethren cannot deduct tithes and offerings on their income taxes.

Despite such problems, Mr. Barriga foresees blossoming years ahead for God's Work in Spain and Portugal. He hopes a full-time minister can be sent to pastor the two countries within 18 months.

Mr. Barriga traveled to Spain and Portugal each year since 1977 and baptized most of the members.

UNITY

scheme, all the compromise would be on one side only — the Church of England's side . . .

"For all of the apparently warm-hearted beckoning on the unity front, the Roman Catholic Church has not yet renounced its own high-handed statement of 1896 about Church of England priests: that their Holy Orders are 'absolutely null and utterly void . . . The price of agreement with Rome is submission to its dogmas. What would become of our valuable distinctiveness then? . . ."

I did not travel with the papal roadshow to Coventry and Liverpool since that was on Pentecost. Instead, I enjoyed a wonderful Holy Day with the brethren in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

I picked up the tour again in Glasgow, Scotland, a city and surrounding regions that contain numerous Catholic believers — many of whom are descendants of immigrants who came over from Ireland.

The main event of the pope's trip to Scotland, which also included a number of events at Edinburgh, the capital, was a tremendous mass in Bellahouston Park.

The attendance for this open-air mass was put at about 260,000. To me it seemed something akin to a religious Nuremberg rally.

When the pope arrived by helicopter, the crowd, which had been surprisingly quiet and self-controlled, erupted in almost pandemonium.

The pope was immediately ushered into one of the four armor-plated bulletproof glass, safety-tired "Popemobiles," which escorted him on a winding pathway up and down the section of the park where the people were standing. It took, I believe, almost a half hour for him to wind his way through.

The Scottish newspaper Daily Record perhaps expressed the reaction of the assembled that day best in its main article the next day titled "Welcome to the Carnival — Never Before Have So Many Gathered for Just One Man."

There is no doubt, as I looked out on the crowd, that they were there precisely to see a man. Despite the pope's message, which in some cases was a strong exhortation to Catholics to be more true to their faith, the crowd didn't seem to pay too much attention to what he was saying.

They were there simply to see him, to bask in his presence. The prophetic implications of such an approach to religion should be quite obvious.

Member runs 6.2-mile race

Blind musician goes the distance

Harley Cannon, a blind member of the Lexington, Ky., church, was featured in the Lexington Herald May 3 after completing a 6.2-mile race May 2. Mr. Cannon is active in the church choir and is a Spokesman Club graduate, according to Lexington member Bob Antrobus. The following article is reprinted by permission of the Lexington Herald.

By Harry Merritt

LEXINGTON, Ky. — With a little help from a friend, Harley Cannon of Lexington made it from start to finish in yesterday's [May 2] 6.2-mile Run Kentucky Run race.

Cannon, a 26-year-old musician, songwriter and recording-studio owner who has been blind since infancy, had never run in a 10-kilometer race before yesterday, but he welcomed the opportunity to add to his growing list of accomplishments.

"I'm really looking forward to it," Cannon said before the start of the race at the Kentucky Horse Park near Lexington. "I'm not really worried about it. I'm a little anxious in the sense of anticipating what's going to happen."

Later, after he crossed the finish line holding the arm of partner John Wagner, Cannon seemed pleased with their time of 1 hour 27 seconds, even if it was a few minutes slower than the 54 to 58 minutes he had predicted.

"I'm just glad I finished," Cannon said. "I was fighting at five miles, going uphill. I was thinking, 'this is ridiculous.'"

But cheers from the crowd and encouragement from Wagner and other runners helped keep Cannon going.

"There was a lot of good camaraderie," said Wagner, who is director of purchasing for the Urban County Government. "People encouraged us."

"I'd hear someone coming up on the right and I'd say, 'Howdy,'" Cannon said.

Cannon, running in 74-degree weather under sunny skies, said one of his main concerns during the race was controlling his breathing.

"I was a little dizzy after I finished, but I'm OK now," he said.

For his effort, Cannon will receive special recognition from the organizers of Run Kentucky Run, which benefits Lexington's Cardinal Hill Hospital. The race was sponsored by Anheuser-Busch and Bennie Robinson, Inc.

The favorite, Duane Gaston of Lexington, won the race in a time of 30 minutes 59 seconds — and celebrated by running another four miles. Paula Strack, Gaston's former wife, was the first woman to complete the race, in 40 minutes three seconds. She finished 43rd. Race officials said more than 1,000 people participated in the race and a 2-mile fun run.

Major's Mailbox Adventure

STORY FOR YOUNG READERS

By Shirley King Johnson

(Jim's father has told him to go home from school during the lunch hour, and to take the papers from city hall with him so they can be turned over to the police.)

Jim thanked the office clerk for the use of the telephone and then hurried out into the hallway. He saw Susie walking along with classmates. They were on their way to the lunchroom.

"Hi!" called out Susie, stopping beside her brother. "Are you going to lunch now?"

"No, I'm going home. I'll see you later."

"Mamma told us to have hot lunch at school today," Susie reminded. "She's not home; she's helping Mrs. Hudson cover a sofa."

"I know, but I've got to go. I need to take something home."

"Do you want me to go home and fix lunch for you, Jimmy?" offered Susie.

"Thanks, but not today, Susie. Good-bye." He hurried on to the double doors and pushed one open. Stuffing the manila envelope inside his shirt, he unlocked his bike in the rack and headed for his house four blocks away.

Turning into the driveway, he saw that his mother's car was gone from the garage. But Major waited at the backyard fence. Jim leaned his bike on its kickstand and opened the gate to greet the dog.

Major was delighted to have his beloved human at home again, and he licked Jim's hands and gave a few joyful leaps. Trying the back door, Jim found it locked. He played with Major a few minutes more and then got up and went around to try the front door. Major trotted along at his side.

The front door was also locked and Jim looked in the place where the key usually hung—it wasn't there.

He sat down on the front step, pulled the manila envelope out from his shirt and hoped his father would come soon so he could get back to school. He was hungry for pizza.

Suspicious man

A car door slammed across the street. Looking up, Jim saw a man in a dark suit get out of a black car. Jim knew he had seen the man somewhere before, and he got up and walked out to the front sidewalk to greet him. Seeing movement at the corner, Jim spotted Susie crossing the intersection at the end of the block. Jim smiled. She's coming home to fix my lunch. She's a sweet sister. But she'll really be disappointed to find we're locked out.

"Hello, Jim." The man who had crossed the street spoke, and Jim suddenly recognized him. It was Mr. Parcher! The man who had gotten so angry and threatening last night when his father would not give him the papers Jim had copied at city hall.

"Hello," gulped Jim, moving the manila envelope behind his back.

"I've come for the papers." He held out his hand.

Jim turned to Major with one quick motion and shoved the large envelope into his mouth. "Mailbox, Major! MAILBOX!"

Major happily trotted off down the sidewalk with the envelope sticking out on each side of his head.

"What did you do that for?" demanded Mr. Parcher.

"Because my father's on the way here with a policeman," Jim replied, suddenly angry. "You have no right to my papers."

"You call your dog back here right now." Mr. Parcher's face was angry, his eyes narrow slits.

"Were you in the car that stopped us last night?" Jim asked, stalling for time.

Mr. Parcher ignored the question. Turning, he began to run after Major. Jim sprinted after them both, yelling to Major, "Mailbox!"

Major reached the mailbox and Susie leaned down to accept the envelope from him.

"Susie, mail that quick!" Jim shouted.

"Major got it wet," protested Susie, "you forgot to wrap plastic around it."

"Just mail it!" Jim shrieked.

"Here, give me that." Mr. Parcher leaped forward just as Susie flipped the mailbox lip up and back.

Thump! They all heard the parcel drop to the bottom of the mailbox.

Mr. Parcher grasped both of Susie's shoulders and began to shake her.

Artwork by Greg Sandilands

"You little smart aleck! I told you not to mail that!"

"Please let go of my sister," Jim pleaded.

The man released Susie and turned to give the mailbox a kick. "I'm not leaving without those papers if I have to break this box apart." He pounded on the top with a fist and then lifted the lid and tried to reach his long, thin arm into the box.

Police arrive

A police car pulled up to the intersection. Right behind it a second car stopped and doors opened on both cars. An officer in blue got out and Mr. Wilson was close behind him. They came quickly over to the sidewalk.

"Trying to break into a United States mailbox is a federal offense," announced the policeman to Mr. Parcher. "Come along with me."

A red-faced Mr. Parcher turned to the officer. "I was trying to get back some papers those kids dropped in there by mistake."

"He threatened Susie," Jim told his father.

Mr. Wilson took Susie up in his arms and she began to sob. "What happened, Jim?" asked Mr. Wilson.

"Mr. Parcher came to the house and wanted the papers in the envelope so I gave it to Major to mail. They're safe in there." Jim pointed to the mailbox. "Mr. Parcher shook Susie by the shoulders."

Mr. Wilson hugged Susie closer. "And send a man from the post office to open this box, will you? Then your chief will be able to see the incriminating material, which should help send the guilty ones to jail."

The police car went on down the street, and Mr. Wilson turned to his children. "But how could Major mail that envelope?" he asked. "He can't reach the lid."

Susie dried her tears on the sleeve of her dress. "Cause I helped him, like I always do," she sniffed.

"She was at the corner," Jim explained, "at the right time."

Shaking his head, Mr. Wilson hugged them both tightly in his arms. "What a cool pair you both are."

"What about Major?" asked Jim. "Isn't he cool, too?"

"He certainly is."

"He's the best dog in the world," added Susie.

"God protected us all. We can be grateful for that," Mr. Wilson said.

Major sat down and looked up at them. The mail always goes through, he seemed to say, and he smiled.

UPDATE

PASADENA — The Festival Office here announced that the following Feast of Tabernacles sites are full and no longer accepting transfers:

Lihue, Hawaii; Biloxi, Miss.; Pasadena; St. Petersburg, Fla.; Squaw Valley, Calif.; and Jekyll Island, Ga.

Sites outside the United States not accepting additional transfers are Penticton, B.C.; Nassau, Bahamas; Runaway Bay, Jamaica; Christ Church, Barbados; and Jerusalem, Israel.

The Feast Office also said that Perth, Australia, was added as a 1982 Feast site.

Rod Matthews of the International Office of Ministerial Services said that brethren must notify appropriate international Festival Offices and/or coordinators of their intentions to transfer.

Last year, he said, members requested Festival information from several regional Festival Offices, but did not ask for transfer approval. Several unexpected transfers, therefore, were "discovered" when the Festival began.

"If you wrote to a regional office or a site coordinator requesting information only on a particular site where you later made your own [housing] arrangements, they will not know whether you actually will be there unless you let them know," Mr. Matthews said.

A postcard or letter stating your intentions and final arrangements is all that is necessary, he added.

At the age of 5, Cannon began to play piano by ear. He later learned to play trumpet, bass guitar and drums. He studied jazz and classical piano and trumpet at Prince Georges Community College and moved to Lexington about six years ago to play with a group of musicians.

The group has since disbanded, but Cannon remained in Lexington to perform at local clubs and restaurants, write songs and advertising jingles and open his Cannon's Recording Studio.

"My primary income is through the studio. I do mostly 'demos' but we have done a couple of records.

"I've been running about four years, on and off," said Cannon, who tries to run two to four miles a day at least five days a week. "I enjoy running. It helps my trumpet playing."

During the early morning or at night when traffic has diminished, Cannon and one of his roommates, Paul Abbott [Ambassador College graduate and member of the Lexington church], run in their neighborhood on Emerson Drive.

Cannon also runs at the YMCA on High Street, where he became acquainted with Wagner. Wagner's encouragement led Cannon to decide to tackle his first race.

"I just asked if he was going to run," Wagner said. "I kind of volunteered to help him along."

Wagner, who runs in the Bluegrass 10,000, had never run a race in tandem before yesterday. He and Cannon worked out a routine of grabbing and switching arms, and Wagner scanned the route for possible obstacles.

dor College students from the Pasadena and Big Sandy campuses left here with John Halford, a pastor-ranked minister who works in Media Services here, June 20 to participate in the fifth session of the Ambassador College Educational Project in Thailand (ACEPT).

Students Ian Bell, Tim Davidson, Don Duchene, Ben Johnson, Felicia Kurck, Nina Lovelady and Kathe Steele from the Pasadena campus and Melody Machin and Cliff Parks from the Big Sandy campus left for Bangkok from the Los Angeles (Calif.) International Airport.

The students will spend six months teaching English and French and aspects of Western culture to Laotian refugees in Thailand as part of the ACEPT program, said Mr. Halford, coordinator of the project.

ACEPT is a joint effort of Ambassador College and Wat Thai (Thai temple) of Los Angeles.

Mr. Halford said that "the United Nations is very pleased with the college's participation and has expressed great interest in the college continuing the program past its original commitment of three sessions."

He said the United Nations and other agencies concerned with the refugees in Thailand are now assisting with educational materials for the Ambassador students there.

According to Mr. Halford, Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong will make a decision later whether the ACEPT program will continue. Mr. Halford is "very happy that Big Sandy students could participate in the fifth session, which will possibly be the final one."

Six Pasadena students returned from the fourth ACEPT session June 10. Dirje Childs, Jeff Caudle and Mike Stangler remained with ACEPT manager Steve Pelfrey and his wife Terry in Thailand.

Mr. Caudle and Mr. Stangler will return for the fall semester at the Pasadena campus.

Mr. Rice, a pastor-ranked minister, addressed 424 brethren from the Auckland church and surrounding areas, Sabbath, June 12.

Mr. Urwiller and Mr. Lennon spoke to 106 brethren the same day in Christchurch, New Zealand.

Mr. Rice and Mr. Urwiller visited the Work's regional office in Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 22, and met with ministers in the Caribbean in May.

HARARE, Zimbabwe — To avoid a 400 percent increase in wrapping costs, the Harare (formerly Salisbury) church here now wraps, labels and sorts by hand Plain Truth magazines scheduled for distribution in Zimbabwe and Zambia, reported Rolf G. Varga, a member here.

Before Harare pastor Rod Stoddart learned of the escalating costs, the company retained to distribute The Plain Truth was already facing three-week delays and problems with PT mailing labels, Mr. Varga said.

To end the delays, mailing problems and cost increases, Mr. Stoddart decided to experiment with hand wrapping. Forty brethren volunteered March 28 to spend eight hours hand wrapping, labeling and sorting some 15,000 Plain Truths at the home of local church elder George Efthyvoulos.

In Mr. Efthyvoulos' garage, wrappers were hand glued, wrapped around Plain Truths, stacked and sorted by mail codes. The process was completed by stuffing the wrapped PTs in mailbags supplied by the Zimbabwe post office system.

According to Mr. Varga, the Church saved US$850 in wrapping costs by the eight hours of service.

PASADENA — On Pentecost morning a minicyclone struck the Kingdom of Tonga, just two months after the devastation brought by cyclone Isaac.

Brethren again escaped with virtually no damage to their properties, although some couldn't make it to Pentecost services because of debris blocking the roads [W/N, March 15, "Tonga Members Survive Severe Winds, Tidal Wave"].

New Zealand

The worldwide recession is reflected in income received in the Auckland Office for May — only an 8.5 percent increase. Mail is down from last year. However, the year-to-date figures stand at a 22 percent increase in income and a 19 percent increase in mail.

The series of ads Pastor General Herbert W. Armstrong wrote for The Wall Street Journal have now been run in The New Zealand Herald and The Dominion.

A powerful message was conveyed, and quite a few readers also asked for subscriptions to The Plain Truth, although this was a secondary purpose.

Mexico

Plans are to triple the 15,000 circulation of the Spanish language Plain Truth (La Pura Verdad) in Mexico by the end of this year.

Ads are being placed in leading newspapers and in Contenido, a monthly magazine with a circulation of 135,000.

'La Pura Verdad' delivery

Evaluation of delivery procedures is necessary to obtain the most effective means of getting the magazines to subscribers overseas.

Most subscribers to La Pura Verdad outside the United States will now receive their magazines airmailed from Costa Rica in Central America.

Magazines printed in Kentucky will be airfreighted to San Jose, the capital of Costa Rica, and mailed from there to Spain and countries in Central and South America.

Unit costs range from US14 to US18 cents — cheaper than using surface mail from the United States — and quicker too (two to four weeks delivery time instead of three to six months).

Better service will undoubtedly please subscribers and stimulate their responsiveness to the magazine.

Ordination

On Pentecost, on his trip to London, Mr. Armstrong with regional director Frank Brown and evangelist Ellis LaRavia, ordained Andrew Silcox a local church elder in the St. Albans, England, church.

His father, Howard Silcox, is a deacon on the board of the Church in the United Kingdom, and his brother is pastor of the Lancaster and Manchester, England, churches.
